

The Postponement of the Convention.

A friend in New York, a strong Fremont man, who has superior advantages for observing the course of things, and whose knowledge and experience in political matters entitle his opinions to great weight, writes in a private letter as follows, in reference to the proposed postponement of the National Convention:

"I heard to-day that a strong effort is going to be made by the more considerate of the friends of the Government to have the call for a Convention re-considered, and to postpone any meeting for a nomination until September. I hope it will be adopted, and that all log-rolling and effort at manufacturing public opinion will be clamored down, by the universal and imperative demand for a united effort—a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether, for the landing of the tottering kingdom of the bogus Confederacy, whose idol worshippers desire nothing so much as they do the engagement of the loyal heart in the bickering, the plotting and planning, and side issues of a Presidential campaign. This expected diversion of the loyal effort from the rigorous prosecution of the war by fire and sword, is all that has kept the rebel hosts in heart for the last year. Let the Government give Grant and his Generals every facility in its power, and demand of them that they make a speedy termination of the rebellion, and let it be done, and by next November Abe Lincoln will be nominated by acclamation by the people all over the country, without the necessity of any Convention at all. And although I would greatly prefer a braver heart, and a wiser head, and a readier hand to guide the Ship of State for the next four years, yet if the people so will, I would say 'amen!' For, I have that confidence in the Omnipotent Divinity of newborn, unadulterated reason, that once won, I would consider it safe from detriment at the hands of any honest and well meaning Administration. I hope, therefore, that nothing aside from the relentless enforcement of every power within the grasp of the Government, may be allowed to interfere with the one object of war, offensive and defensive, until the cause of the war is dead and buried.

If ex-Governor Morgan and his associates who took the responsibility of calling and fixing the time and place for the Convention, do not see fit to postpone it, let the people through the loyal press set up, and keep up such a remonstrance as will compel them to do it. As to the place, if a Convention shall be desirable, I have no objection to Baltimore; for Maryland, with all her bloody record, is going to be the first willing and genuine convert to the regeneration that cometh through the Gospel of emancipation. The people of that State will have sanctioned what I now predict for them before you receive this. But there is no need of agitating the presidential question now. The record of war for the next six months, may wholly change the face of public affairs, and the country may well consider whether it were not better to wait the unfolding of events, and then have a month for preparation before final action will be constitutionally demanded. Let the Copperheads nominate if they choose, and dedicate the 4th of July with a jubilee over an already dead and stinking carcass, if Grant can only make the day twice glorious by marching triumphantly into the citadel before which their hero cowered and died. Let the country but celebrate the coming 4th of July by the fall of Richmond, as it did last year of Vicksburg, and the bogus celebration at Chicago will go off at half-cock, and flash in the pan at that. It will be no matter how many sham processions they may get up under the lead of their deposed and dishonored leader. Only give us the prestige of an advancing and victorious army at work in earnest, and the day will be ours."

THE MADISON REPUBLICAN is again distressing itself about the Republican majority in this city. It took occasion on the announcement of the recent bounty vote here, to attribute, by implication at least, the defeat of that measure to the large preponderance of the Republicans, saying that it was "defeated by just about the usual Republican majority, and the conclusion to which this profound logician and extremely honest and candid politician would have its readers come to is, that all the Republicans voted against the bounty, and all the Democrats voted for it; consequently that the professions of loyalty by Republicans, are mere empty pretensions; that their patriotism is subordinate to their love of money. That is the sum of what the Patriot means, though it has a sneaking way of declaring it. The facts of the case as we have before stated, are quite different, but we do not expect this outrageously misnamed paper will have the fairness to pay any attention to them. While many of the leading Republicans worked hard for the measure and many of the party voted for it, we are quite sure that a large portion of the Democrats voted against it; that the proportion of the Republicans that voted for it was much larger than that of the Democrats.

But we need not spend time to vindicate the loyalty of the citizens of Janesville against the attacks of such a paper as the Madison Patriot. Their record, when compared with the course of that paper will save all such work.

THE STATE of New Jersey has yet to raise 14,242 troops to fill the Government calls upon her, and yet the Copperheads in the Legislature of that State are trying to pass a bill imposing a fine of $500 upon any person who enlists a negro in that State into the Federal service.

In a recent conversation with an American gentleman in St. Petersburg, Prince Gortschakoff, discussing the Emperor's policy, declared that the progress of Russia, within the next two years would astonish the world.

A Chinese Crucifixion.

The following account of a recent crucifixion in China, interesting because of its resemblance to those mentioned in Scripture, is by Mr. James Jones, of Amoy, who witnessed the execution on the 28th of October:

"The victim was a well known thief. On his trial before his judge, he refused to criminate himself, although repeatedly scourged until his back was raw. If a female witness fails in giving satisfactory evidence in a court of justice, she is beaten with a leather strap across the mouth. This wife, desirous of sparing her husband, refused to give evidence, but after two or three applications of the strap her courage gave away. She confessed his guilt, at the same time admitting that two hundred dollars of the money so derived was hidden in the sea near the beach. Officers were sent in search and finding the money in the place indicated, the prisoner was sentenced to decapitation by the Chinese, the most severe of punishments, because they imagine that if a man leaves this world minus his members, he appears in the same condition in the next. The culprit therefore tried to be crushed instead of being beheaded. Latin form, the foot being inserted in a stout plank, and the criminal standing on a board, had nails driven through his feet, his hands scratched and nailed to the crossbeam. His legs were fastened to the cross with an iron chain, and his arms bound with cords, and on the cord round his waist was inserted a piece of wood, on which was written his name and offence, a similar piece of his right arm contained his sentence, namely, to remain on the cross day and night until he died; another on his left arm had the name of the judge, with his titles and offices. The criminal was nailed to the cross inside the Yunnan, in the presence of the magistrate, and then carried by four coolies to one of the principal thoroughfares leading from the city where he was left during the day, but removed at night into the prison, for fear of his friends attempting to rescue him, and again carried forth at daylight in charge of two soldiers.

He was crucified at noon on Wednesday, and Mr. Jones conversed with him at five in the evening. He complained of pain in the chest and thirst. On Thursday he slept for some hours, when the cross was laid down within the jail compound. No one was allowed to supply him with food or drink, and during the day there was quite a fair in front of the cross, people being attracted from a distance, and the sweetest vendors driving a large trade. On Saturday he was still alive, when the Taoist was appealed to by a foreigner to put an end to the wretched man's sufferings, and he immediately gave orders that vinegar be administered, which it was expected would produce death; but the result was otherwise, and at sunset, when the cross was taken within the jail, two soldiers, with stout bamboos, broke both his legs, and then strangled him.

A Faithful Widow.

From Harper's Weekly.

The loiterer along Broadway, who stops to look at the monument of General Montgomery in St. Paul's Church, will be glad to read this touching incident, related by Mr. Hunt, in his lately published "Life of Edward Livingston." Montgomery was captain in the British army when he first met Livingston's sister Jane, whom he afterwards married. When the revolutionary war began, he was made one of the eight brigadier generals of the army of the United States. He had been married but two years, but his wife did not oppose his departure, and he took leave of her at Saratoga, in 1776, upon his way to Canada. His parting words to her were, "You shall never have cause to blush for your Montgomery," and she never saw him again.

In the year 1815 the Legislature of New York resolved to transfer his remains from Canada, and Edward Livingston's son, Lewis, the nephew of Mrs. Montgomery, was commissioned by Governor De Witt Clinton to superintend the removal. On the 9th of July they reached Albany, and lay in state in the capitol. On Monday they were taken, under military escort, upon the steamer Richmond, to New York. Mr. Hunt says:

"The Governor had advised Mrs. Montgomery at about what hour the boat bearing the remains of her husband would pass her house, Montgomery place. By her own request she stood alone on the porch at the appointed time. She had lived with the General but two years. It was then almost forty-three years since she had parted with him at Saratoga. For a third of a century out of this period the waters of the Hudson, like all other waters, had been ignorant of steam vessels. The change which in the meantime had come over her person was not greater than that which the face of the country, its Government, and all the objects with which she was familiar had undergone. Yet she had continued as faithful to the memory of her 'soldier,' as she had called him, as if she still looked for him to come back alive and unaltered. The steamer halted before her, the 'Dead March' was played by the band, a salute was fired, and the ashes of the departed hero passed on. The attendants of the venerable widow now sought her. She had encountered her emotions, and fallen to the floor in a swoon."

The Wisconsin of Wednesday stated in a brief item that Gen. King, our minister to Rome, was about to return home next summer on account of his health. The News of yesterday takes up this baseless rumor and says that the return of Gen. King will "give somebody else a turn at the outfit and salary," and indulges in other ill-natured comments—to which we will merely say—

First, that those who ought to know Gen. King's intentions, are not aware that he means to return at the time stated; and Second, that neither he nor his predecessors have received any 'outfit' whatever. He simply receives his salary and a small allowance for incidentals, which does not half cover the extra expenses for which it was granted.

As to Gen. King's ability to represent the Government at the Court of Rome or elsewhere, those who know him need no assurance whatever. We wish that we were as well represented abroad everywhere as we are at home. That he resigned such a position to enter the military service of his country is, however, an offense for which the News and like organs can never forgive him.—Ed. Sentinel.

Two dollars traveling in Centre county, Pennsylvania, recently hit upon an ingenious expedient to raise the wind. One of them traveled in advance from house to house, asserting that the Lack Haven Bank had suspended payment, and refused its notes in payment for the goods he sold. The next day his accomplice came along, confirming the report, but receiving the notes in payment for his goods, alleging that he was indebted to the bank.

The Poland, Me. Shovel Company turn out eighty-five dozen shovels and spades, per day, and the Descenting Company, of the same place, use two thousand five hundred bushels of potatoes per week.

RELIGIOUS MISCELLANY.

GROWTH OF THE MORAL SENSE OF LIFE.

We are prone to imagine that our temptations are peculiar; that other hearts are free from secret burdens that oppress our morning and cast a cloud upon our joy; that life has for others a freer expansion, and a less embarrassed way. But in no one has God made the human heart so cruel, its thoughtless sense of joy, and the shadow of our moral being rests darkly on us all. We cannot take the world as it comes, enjoying what it offers, and passing by its sufferings and its burdens with our lightest touch; we get involved in the deep questions of Conscience and Duty, and the sense of Responsibility stills the calm of the spirit, and suffers no man to repose without trouble on the bosom of life.

Infinite are the ways in which the devices and aims of the Moral Nature break the instinctive happiness that lives for the day, and forgets the morrow; but especially this awakening of deeper and sadder life takes place in all; and struggle, fear, disappointment, the partial feeling of an unfulfilled destiny, the restless yearnings of uncertain hopes, are in the heart of every man who has been but a step above the animal life. There were we know of what passes in the minds of those who are more than men, we learn that no man is peculiar in his moral experience—that beneath the smoothest surface of outward life lie deep cares of the heart—and that, if we fall under our burdens, we fall beneath the temptations that are common to man, the existence of which others as little suspect in us as we do in them. We have but the trials that are incident to humanity; there is nothing peculiar in our case—and we must take up our burdens of life as heart that, if we are earnest and true to our temptations, God will support us, as, in the past fidelity of his providence, He has supported others as helplessly laden as ourselves.—J. H. From.

Hoping for a Hope.—A man dying from thirst stands before a fountain.

"Have you drink?"

"No, but I hope I shall."

"Do you wish to drink?"

"No; but I hope I shall wish to drink."

"Why does he not drink?"

"Because he has no desire to."

"Why then does he stand there?"

"Because he hopes he shall have such a desire."

But if the promising of a dying agony, and the sweetening streams before him, leave him without that desire, what does his life amount to?

So stand we poor sinners by the fountain of the water of life. We look at the waters, and look at those who are drinking, and look at the invitation—"whosoever will," and then stand there still and hope that we shall drink. What is such a hope good for? Why not "take the water of life freely?" This hoping for a hope is often the devil's opiate for a partially awakened sinner. God's direction is, "Lay hold upon the hope set before you."

An exchange publishes the following. It is a hard hit at "some people."

"WAXEN.—One hundred and seventy-five young men, of shapes and sizes from the tall, graceful dandy, with hair enough on his upper lip to stuff a barber's cushion, down to the little hump-backed, freckle-faced, bow-legged, carrot-headed upstart. The object is to form a singing corps, to be in attendance at the church doors on each Sabbath, before the commencement of divine service, to stare at ladies as they enter, and to make delicate and gentlemanly remarks about their persons and dress. All who wish to enlist in the above corps will appear at the various church doors next Sabbath morning, where they will be duly inspected, and their names, personal appearance and quantity of brains registered in a book kept for that purpose, and published in the newspapers. To prevent a general rush it will be well to state that none will be enlisted who possess intellectual capacity above that of a well-bred donkey."

A VERY LOYAL CATHOLIC PRIEST.—"Catholon" of the Boston Journal found a Catholic priest way out in Central Missouri, of most decided and active loyalty. He hosted the stars and stripes over the door of his church at the beginning of the war, and has kept it flying ever since. His life has been threatened, he has been warned to flee, but he has maintained his ground. Said the priest:

"All of the poor men of my parish are unconditionally loyal. They are all in favor of immediate emancipation. It is not so with the rich men. The poor men, sir, feel that their homes are from God. They know that slavery would deprive them of those homes, and by instinct they are opposed to slavery."

SUCCESSOR TO REV. T. S. KING.—The Portland Argus says that Rev. Horatio Stephens, pastor of the First Parish Society in that city, gave notice on Sunday that he should deliver his valedictory sermon March 29th. He expects to leave for California in September, to become a pastor of the church of the late Rev. T. Starr King. In the meantime he will preach, the Argus understands, for Rev. Dr. Belows, of New York, who has sailed for California to fill the pulpit, made vacant by the death of Mr. King, some six months, at the expiration of which time, Mr. Stephens will assume the duties.

LIFE'S PHASES.—"A Christian's life is laid in the loom of time to a pattern which he does not see, but God does; and his heart is a shuttle. On one side of the loom is sorrow, and on the other side joy; and the shuttle, struck alternately by each, flies back and forth, carrying the thread, which is white or black, as the pattern needs; and in the end, when God shall lift up the finished garment, and all its changing hues shall glance out, it will then appear that the deep and dark colors were as needful to beauty as the bright and high colors."

—Revelation is not more a new light than a new heart and will; revelation to me is the conquest and renewal of me. What is lovely will not be encountered without love.

Resolutions have been introduced in the Ohio Legislature concerning Vallandigham's advice for reprisals. It is characterized as "nothing less than an invitation to his sympathizers by a pensioned traitor, subsisting on a disloyal charity, to involve the innocent with the offending in indiscriminate assassinations, burnings and slaughter." The concluding resolution reads as follows:

Resolved, That in expressing their condemnation of these acts of violence, this General Assembly cannot forbear to express their profound regret that they are not without that prevention which goes far to nullify repentance; that hard though it be for brave men to brook the severity and insults of those who protect the protection of those common liberties and common country that are periling lives and shedding their blood, Ohio earnestly counsels her veterans to surpass their heroic devotion in the field by the greater heroism of forbearance and moderation, under the sting of insult from their revilers at home, and to await the coming sword of that popular judgment, which sooner or later will overthrow their traducers beneath the execrations of an indignant people.

INSURE WITH THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF WISCONSIN.

INSURE WITH THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF WISCONSIN.—It is the BEST COMPANY FOR WESTERN MEN.—The reasons why this is the best Company, are: That it is a Western Company, made up of and managed by Western men, doing all or nearly all its business in the Northwest, and concentrating in this one Company a superior class of risks, mostly of young men, or men in the prime of life, and they selected with as great care in regard to eligibility to Life Insurance, as are the risks of any other company.

It is true that the Company has neither the age nor the accumulations of some eastern companies, but is gaining the latter very fast; is vigorous for one of its age; is doing a large business, having issued 637 policies in the months of December and January just passed, and is doing its business as economically as the same can be done anywhere. It has for its guide, the experience of all older companies, and among its managers some of the best business men in the northwest.

This is the first successful effort ever made to build up a similar institution in the West, and it should be the pride, as it certainly is the interest, of every business man in this section of the State, to identify himself with its growth.

This Company issues non-forfeiting policies, upon which premiums are paid in five or ten annual payments. These non-forfeiting policies are very desirable, as they guarantee to the policy holder the benefit of all the money that he pays into the Company, and also enable him to pay his premiums for the whole of life while he is young, or at an early period, thus relieving him from the burden of payment in old age. Insured upon this plan, (as well as on all other policies that this Company issues) become due and payable at death, should death occur before the ten years expire.

It also issues the endowment policy, which becomes due and payable to the party assured at a stated age specified. These latter policies are becoming quite popular, and are particularly desirable for young men.
